HOSPITAL ADMINISTRATORS HONOR DR. BRADLEY

At the Educational Program held at Barnes on June 4, over fifty hospital administrators honored Dr. F. R. Bradley, Director, for his pioneer work in establishing a curricula for courses in hospital administration. The event marked the 10th anniversary for the first Washington University Course in Hospital Administration, which was the first such course to be set up under auspices of a medical school.

Origins of the course go back to 1944, when the American College of Hospital Administrators, of which Dr. Bradley was then a trustee, was approached by the Kellogg Foundation. The Foundation, interested in rural health, was concerned because most hospital administrators were not well trained.

A Joint Commission on Education was formed as the result, with Dr. Bradley as vice chairman. Since the chairman himself, now deceased, was not well, Dr. Bradley bore the brunt of the study. By 1948 the new curricula had been put into effect and students accepted at Washington, Johns Hopkins, Yale, Minnesota, and Toronto Universities. There are now 16 such courses offered in this country.

Principal speakers at the Educational Program were Ray E. Brown, Superintendent

HOUSE OFFICERS ARE COVERED BY FICA

The phrase: "Doctors aren't eligible for Social Security," has been heard so frequently that many house officers accept it without question. The truth is that any person who pays into Social Security, whether physician or not, is eligible for benefits according to his eligibility under Social Security Administration regulations. The law requires that house officers come under Social Security during their period of special training, and the hospital is required to withhold the standard F. I. C. A. deduction.

HOUSE OFFICERS ARE COVERED BY

Twenty years ago the majority of physicians taking specialty training were single and had no particular need for Social Security coverage, but that situation has now reversed itself. In recognition of the fact that house officers are frequently financially unable to carry adequate life insurance to protect their families, Social Security regulations were changed to include all house staff members except first year interns. Interns are still exempt since it is possible to go into practice in some states after one year of rotating internship, but house officers who spend several years in specialty training need the protection offered by Social Security.

Many house officers are covered by Social Security before their residency begins, as a result of having worked during the summers between school terms or part time during school. One Social Security quarter of coverage results from any calendar quarter in which a person is paid $50 or more in wages.

A person is fully insured if, at the time they reach retirement age, become disabled, or die, they have one quarter of coverage (earned any time after 1936) for each two full calendar quarters after 1950. This requirement is not usually difficult for a house officer to meet in the event of his death during residency training. In addition, 40 quarters of coverage insures a person for life. If a physician has worked part time or a few summers while attending school, has been covered 12 or 16 quarters while in specialty training, and has a minimum of 8 quarters coverage while in military service, a very little additional salaried employment is apt to give him the 40 quarters necessary to fully insure him for life.

Best wishes to HENRIETTA SMALLY, Nurse Assistant on 3400, and EUGENE GRADY, Housekeeping, who were married May 18 in St. Louis. ANNA BLACK, Nurse Assistant, was bridesmaid.....CAROLE BRADBURY, Personnel, recently spent 10 days as a surgical patient on 7200 and is now recuperating at home..... PHYLLIS SMITH, Dietary Aide for the past two years, has been transferred to

Benefits for survivor payments are the same whether fully insured (40 quarters), or currently insured (6 out of the 13 quarters ending with the quarter of death). Monthly benefits are paid to the widow and to each child until the child is eighteen years of age, plus a lump sum death payment. For single house officers the lump sum death payment is generally the only benefit and is paid to the person bearing the funeral expense.

During specialty training a house officer probably pays less than $75 into Social Security, which, in the event of his death, would be the total premium paid on perhaps tens of thousands of dollars paid in monthly benefits to his immediate family. Even though physicians in general cannot count on Social Security in their retirement plan, Social Security is the most inexpensive life insurance house officers can buy. For Social Security is not life insurance in the common sense: it is a government plan whereby a family does not suffer undue financial hardship in the event of the breadwinner's death. As its name implies, it is truly social security.

DR. DEMPSEY TO HEAD MEDICAL SCHOOL 6330 Washington Avenue, University City.

Dr. Edward W. Dempsey, professor of anatomy and head of the anatomy department, has been appointed dean of the Washington University School of Medicine effective September 1. He will replace Dr. Oliver H. Lowry, who has held the post since September, 1955.

Dr. Dempsey, assistant to the dean for two years, will retain his posts in the anatomy department. He is noted for his work on the chemical structure of the cell and for his pioneer studies on electron microscopy. He was a faculty member of the Harvard Medical School from 1938 to 1950, at which time he joined the Washington University staff. Dr. Dempsey lives with his wife and three children at

Dr. Lowry, who has continued as professor and head of the department of pharmacology during his tenure as dean of the Medical School, will devote his time to teaching and research. Dr. Lowry has invented several instruments for making exceedingly fine and delicate measurements. The Lowry balance, measuring weights to the billionth of a gram, has special applicability to research on brain tissues where structure varies from area to area in type and composition of cells.

The announcement of Dr. Dempsey's appointment as dean was made at the annual banquet of the Medical Alumni Association held in the Chase Hotel.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

George Bowles

The passing of spring to summer is far more than the changing of the seasons. Surely for most of us it is a reminder of the unfolding of new life in the beauty of the creation which surrounds us. Summer comes to add the growing forces which combine to develop the bud and produce the fruit of the soil upon which we depend so heavily. The flowers come to add beauty and render cheerfulness in the many places in which the thoughtful human being might use them.

The summer also brings other benefits to many of us. Visits with loved ones so often fall within these months. Longer days provide time for the doing of things that might be crowded out during the more pressing times of the year. We see young people complete years of preparation for chosen professions and launch out to assume adult responsibilities. Any thinking person could continue such a list as this, and he would find a satisfaction in so doing.

What we think of any day is determined largely by our personal viewpoints. Marie Beynon Ray, an industrial psychologist and counselor, says that our enemies are: boredom, worry, a sense of inferiority, fear, indecision, over-sensitivity and a mean spirit. As the seasons change, maybe it would be a good thing along the way to change ourselves. Summer would be a good time to shed some of the enemies listed by the psychologist - in case we have been wearing them during the year. It would improve the viewpoint.
